NOTICE FOR OBJECTIONS

APPLICATION NO. 990445
 ALTAGAS UTILITIES INC.
 1999/2000 WINTER PERIOD GAS COST RECOVERY RATE

Take Notice that the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board (the EUB) may continue to process this Application without further notice if no bona fide objections are received on or before 22 October 1999.

Nature of the Application

AltaGas Utilities Inc. (AltaGas), has applied to the EUB by Application dated 5 October 1999 for approval of a Gas Cost Recovery Rate (GCRR) for the 1999/2000 winter period (1 November 1999 to 31 March 2000). The proposed GCRR of $3.343/Gigajoule (GJ) is $0.857 higher than the 1998/1999 winter period GCRR of $2.486/GJ and $0.309/GJ less than the last approved 1999 summer period GCRR of $3.652.

AltaGas advised that on 23 September 1999 it provided details of its proposal for the 1999/2000 winter period GCRR to interested parties and consumer groups that participated in its 1998/1999 winter period GCRR application. AltaGas further advised that it had received no objections to its proposal.

CRIME STOPPERS

By Cst. J. E. McDonald
 and Cst. M. D. Caudron
 Elk Point Detachment

■ Sometime between 10:00 a.m. on October 9, 1999 and 10:45 p.m. on October 10, 1999 individuals broke into a residence in Fishing Lake at the far end of Aulotte Road on the north side and stole two stereos. The stereos are described as a black Venturer model 86835 portable stereo with CD and tape player and the second is a black Hitachi portable stereo with 3 CD and 2 tape capability.

■ Between the dates of October 1 and 2, 1999, culprits entered a farmer's residence and removed a safe which contained approximately $200 to $400 in coins. Some of the coins were old enough that silver was used in their composition. These coins were dimes and nickels of Canadian currency. The location of the residence is north east of Laurier Lake.

Anyone with information regarding either of these crimes is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477) or the Elk Point RCMP Detachment at (780) 724-3829.

Crime Stoppers will pay up to $2000 for information leading to the arrest of the person(s) responsible for this or any other crime. You do not have to reveal your identity and if your tip leads to an arrest you qualify for an award.

The Alberta Children's Initiative: ministries working together toward shared goals

By Deanna Easthope
FCSS Director

Recently, I was able to attend the Alberta Government conference called, "First Circle, Uniting for Children." I learned there are several things happening that I am sure not everyone knows about.

The Alberta government introduced the Alberta Children's Initiative in November, 1998 with the long-term vision that Alberta's children will be well cared for, safe, successful at learning, and healthy.

The Alberta Children's Initiative also represents a new way of doing business in government. Rather than Ministries working independently, the Initiative commits ministries to work together toward commonly-shared goals. With the benefits of collaborative planning, it enables government to introduce programs and services for children and families which are too broad for a single Ministry to fully address on its own.

For example, a number of cross-government initiatives for children are underway. Some of these are:

1. Fetal Alcohol Syndrome. The Alberta Government is working on prevention, identification and treatment of individuals with FAS. A number of strategies are under way including increasing public awareness, developing training and better tools for professionals, and supporting the search for innovative approaches through community projects.

2. Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution. An act was written which recognizes that children involved in prostitution are victims of sexual abuse. It enables police and social workers to apprehend children involved in prostitution or at risk of becoming involved and take them to a protective safe house, where they receive emergency care and an assessment.

3. Student Health. Through the Student Health initiative, students with special needs can now obtain services that range from rehabilitation services (such as speech-language therapy) to nursing services to services for emotional/behavioral disorders (such as a psychologist). Ensuring their health needs are met enables these children to focus on learning, fully participate in classroom activities and achieve their full potential.

4. Mental Health

Services. This is very complex and is another objective outlined in the Alberta Children's Initiative. The aim is to establish a comprehensive system of mental health services for children. Over the next two years, efforts will be made to enhance children's mental health services and develop training designed to increase community awareness and professional capacity to work with children with mental health needs.

The above four focus areas all involve joint decision-making and are being developed under the Alberta Children's Initiative. Yes, the Alberta Government is putting forth great effort and support around the needs of children.

First Night planning underway

Attendance was small but ideas came thick and fast as the First Night Festival Committee held their first meeting to plan a fitting celebration to mark the end of the 1900s and the beginning of the year 2000.

A show highlighting fashions of each decade of the 1900s, with appropriate music, is being considered, as is a display of historic photographs showing the community at all stages of growth. Musical entertainment, visits to Parkview Extended Care and Heritage Lodge, and an ice sculpture contest were other ideas put forward at the meeting.

A contest to find a song to welcome 2000 is also in the planning stages.

A fireworks display will end the year with a bang if sufficient funds are raised to cover an approximate $1600 cost.

Co-operation...
Shaping Our Future

When we envision an ideal future, most of us imagine stable employment, economic security and strong, caring communities.

In recent years we have seen a concentration of economic power in the hands of huge multi-national businesses. Decisions affecting consumers the world over are being made by fewer people. Jobs can be whisked from one country to another on a whim, throwing people out of work and weakening communities.

Co-operatives offer an effective alternative. They are strongly rooted in local communities, with ownership and control in the hands of local people. The jobs they create won't suddenly disappear to a cheaper labour market, and the goods and services they provide are offered for the benefit of their members, not for the enrichment of the world's economic elite.

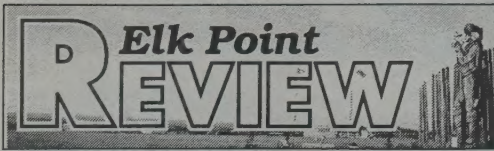

At the same time, co-operatives are well-equipped to operate in today's world. With their shared philosophy and business ethic, co-ops around the world are predisposed to work together and represent sufficient economic muscle to compete in a global economy.

Co-operatives are bringing people together to build a better world. Whether it is in agriculture, financial services, insurance, housing or employment, co-operatives are growing, adapting and changing... helping to shape a better future for us all.

Your daily cup

By Manon Joice
Review Contributor

I'd like to thank everyone for their positive feedback on this new entry. I was chatting with a friend some time ago and we were discussing the nature of success and successful persons. As a result we concluded most persons who enjoy success in their lives, whether it be personal, financial or spiritual, have taken what could be considered a risk to attain their happiness.

"Leap and the net will appear" was a popular saying a few years ago. It stemmed from the bestselling book, "The Artist's Way."

Simply, it means to take an act of faith. One should believe that in all risks we take we will remain whole, intact and even better. You must trust in the end you will be protected. That is not to say that one will always achieve great success, however one will always earn something from a risk even if it is a lesson.

We have all been given opportunity. I believe, however, the difference in those who take advantage of an opportunity is a belief that no matter the outcome, the risk, in and of itself, is small because we were not meant to fail. Those who risk understand nothing is a failure, only another stepping stone to something greater.

We risk hurt feelings when we tell someone we care, we risk financial stability when we leave a job, and we risk looking like a fool when we believe in a greater spirit. The grand possibility though would be, we find a mate for life, we become financially independent, and we become an essential instrument in this universe. And as a result of the latter, we realize we could never fail entirely, we were never meant to.

■ From the Legislature

Sustainable Livestock Production Act has been proposed

By Paul Langevin, MLA
Lac La Biche - St. Paul

The Livestock Regulations Stakeholder Advisory Group (LRSAG) has started the consultation process to gather feedback on the proposed Sustainable Livestock Production Act, regulations and standards.

LRSAG was organized by the minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, to draft a framework and gather views on how our province should balance economic development and environmental sustainability. The LRSAG is now publicly distributing the proposed Act, regulations and standards. The proposed Act takes into account concerns Albertans raised over livestock threshold numbers, municipal involvement and enforcement of regulations during consultations.

LRSAG is composed of ordinary Albertans and includes representatives from health, environment, municipal governments, and livestock production. All interested Albertans are urged to contribute by November 1, 1999.

Written correspondence may be sent to my constituency office at Box 1848, St. Paul, Alberta T0A 3A0 or by Fax to 645-5787.

■ The Garden Path

Tips on vegetable storage

By Lois Hole
Garden Expert

When someone works so diligently all summer long to sow a beautiful crop of vegetables, it's understandable that the first blast of cold autumn air can cause a great deal of anxiety. What usually ensues is a bout of panic harvesting whereby gardeners scurry outside and frantically strip every remaining vegetable from the patch, stuff them into old sacks, boxes and bags and then unceremoniously toss them in the basement or garage. Inevitably, a large portion of the vegetables rot and eventually end up in the garbage.

The first rule of fall harvesting, and I know it's difficult, is to stay calm. After all, most of the very frost sensitive vegetables like corn, beans and tomatoes have already been picked and nearly all of the remaining vegetables are remarkably frost tolerant. In fact, the flavor of rutabaga like rutabaga, brussel sprouts and parsnips is substantially improved after exposure to a few very hard frosts. Cold air tends to reduce the slight bitter taste inherent in these three vegetables as well as contribute to an increase in sugar content. While the flavor of other cool season crops like carrots, cabbage and broccoli does not improve with freezing weather, neither does it diminish.

Yet there is one compelling reason for leaving these vegetables in the garden for as long as possible into the fall and that is, quite simply, that basements and garages are just too warm for most crops. Even cold basements seldom drop below 12C or 14C while most vegetables keep best at temperatures just slightly above freezing. Squash, pumpkins and potatoes are an exception to their rule. Squash and pumpkins require temperatures around 10C - 12C while potatoes store best at 5C - 8C.

Now, don't get me wrong, I'm not advocating that vegetables should be left in the garden until the final moments prior to winter freeze-up, but definitely consider leaving them in the patch a little later, particularly if your storage area is less than ideal. Also, keep in mind that although some vegetables like lettuce, onions, cauliflower and broccoli will tolerate several degrees of frost, extended periods at very cold temperatures in the garden could cause them to break down in storage.

Squash and pumpkins are examples of crops that can tolerate only a very light frost on the mature fruit. Colder temperatures penetrate through the skin causing water soaked patches that lead to rapid collapse of the fruit. Potato tubers are sensitive to frost, but are insulated from cold by the soil. But be forewarned. Any tubers that may be exposed to the air because of weathering of the hills or cracks in the soil are very prone to freezing and will rot very quickly in storage.

Unfortunately, I learned this lesson the hard way back when my husband Ted and I first began market gardening. An unseasonably early cold snap one autumn froze the odd potato here and there in our potato field. Assuming that the damage was negligible, we harvested the entire crop of near fifty tons and piled them into our root cellar. By January, virtually every single potato had shrunk into a stinking, fetid mass the smell of which I shall never forget.

This incident indelibly etched Rule Two into my mind — "Garbage in, garbage out". Always be particularly vigilant at harvest time and select only blemish free vegetables for storage. Remember that vegetables never improve in storage. Blemishes that initially appear to be rather insignificant rapidly enlarge from bacterial and fungal break down leading to collapse of the infected vegetable or worse, rotting of the entire pile. The best course of action to take with blemished vegetables is to discard the affected part and then utilize the rest of the vegetable fairly quickly.

Be very careful not to bruise vegetables at any point during harvest. Squash, pumpkins and potatoes are notoriously prone to storage rot if they've been bumped or dropped during handling. In fact, to prevent bruising injury, no produce should be dropped from a height greater than 15cm (6") at any time.

Keep in mind that some vegetables store best when they've been heat cured for a few days prior to storage. Heat curing involves simply leaving certain vegetables in a warm, dry room for a day or two prior to storage to set the skins. For example, squash stores best after it's been cured for several days at 26C while onions cured at 35C for a day, then stored near freezing can keep for up to eight months.

One simple and interesting way to evaluate your storage area is to "read" potato tubers. Potatoes are terrific for providing feed back on how well they have been treated during storage. They are like small biological recorders of their environment. For example, if they are too warm, they will sprout; if they get too cold, they taste sweet; if they turn green, they have been exposed to light; if they turn black in the centre, they can't breathe; if they lose a lot of weight, it's too dry and so on.

If storing vegetables sounds too difficult, don't get discouraged. With any luck, by next spring, you could be pulling your last carrot from the basement on the same day that you dig your first new baby carrot of the season.

Library storytime friends learn all about flying kites

By Karina Mitchell
Librarian

October is Stamp Collecting Month. In honor of this special month, Canada Post has issued a series of stamps for collectors. Kites provide the theme for Stamp Month 1999 and have been designed by Debbie Adams. She has used four kite shapes in her work - a box kite, a dragon centipede kite, an Indian kite style and a sport kite, the kind that could lift you off the ground if you were being pulled behind a boat.

So what does that have to do with the Library? Well, if you attend Story Time, it means a lot. We have been reading stories about kites, and the wind and all the wonderful fun you can have with them. We made clouds out of cotton balls and we even learned a little about using real stamps when we decorated a kite and sent it to St. Paul Library's Story Time. We can't wait until we receive a letter back from their Story Time. Whether you are interested in kites or stamp collecting, the library is the place to be for your information. And you can check out the kite we have displayed in the library.

Literacy class producing their own newspaper

By Leanne Wilson
Student Journalist

Hello from F. G. Miller High School. Well, as junior high students are learning how to parlez en francais, the rest of the junior high student body is attending Literacy, a course aimed at developing students' language skills. Literacy was developed locally and will be offered for the first time this year as opposed to the additional CTS courses offered last year.

One project the Grade 9 Literacy class works on is F. G. Miller's very own newspaper, The Crusader Clarion, which made its debut in September of this year. Clarion stands for a loud and clear call or summons, a ringing speech or phrase that stirs to action.

The newspaper is designed for students by students and will be published the 15th of each month. The Clarion will include students' work such as cartoons, literature and sports articles, artwork, as well as a counsellor column and much more.

Mrs. Bintz's Literacy 9 class, with the assistance of Ms Smereka, will do the majority of the work. The Literacy 9 class works on many journalistic related activities such as summarizing news articles and writing short editorials. For two days of every week, some students edit the Clarion while others write articles. The students enjoy the variety of creative writing as well as the opportunity to publish a student paper.

The school newsletter, known as the Crusader Updater, has also undergone some improvements. Along with an attractive new look and format, the Updater will be mailed to various selected families each month to help ensure parents are aware of the newsletter. But every student will still receive the monthly publication to take home.

Now Crusaders will be well informed with much enjoyable reading ahead of them. That's all from the halls of F. G. Miller for this week.

Thank You

FEDECHKO

The family of the late John Fedechko, would like to express sincere thank you to our relatives and friends who brought food, fruit baskets, sent flowers, cards, phone calls and visited us at our homes. Also thank you for the donations to Charities during the funeral.

Thank you to the St. Therese Auxiliary staff for the care our father received and for the lovely fruit basket.

Special thank you to Rev. Deacon Richard Nibogie and cantors Kate and Mary. A big thank you to the ladies of the Holy Ascension Church for preparing the lovely meal.

Many thanks to John, Caroline and Staff of Yewchin's Funeral Chapel.

Vickie, Steve, Bill, Marge and our Families.

In Memoriam

ELIUK, Metro

In loving memory of my husband, our father, grandfather & gido, Metro, who passed away Oct. 23, 1997.

*We mourn for you in silence
No eyes can see us weep
But many a silent tear is shed
While others are asleep.
We still miss you in, oh so many ways
We would give the world to have you here
Like "in the old days"
We smile as we think of you.
Hold back tears as we speak your name
Our hearts will always be broken
Our lives will never be the same.*

Forever loved, sadly missed and always remembered by Tillie, Alice & Dale & Family; Ron, Sylvia & Family; Eugene, Bonnie & Family.

Let the games begin! It's hockey season!

By Doug Bassett
Review Sports

We interrupt this marriage to bring you the hockey season. That's right, folks, the hockey season. It's finally here. Positive feedback was received again this year, on this past weekend, when Kelly Pratt was here for the very well attended annual skills clinic on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Some of our players have gone on to greener pastures, but once again for the ones who are left, our Midget and Bantam teams have joined forces with Dewberry in an effort to see hockey survive in the smaller centres. It will be a challenge, but we will survive.

Both our Midget and Bantam teams have entered into tier one of the very competitive North East League. The Pee wee team and our Atom team have entered tier two to start the season. Teams will be allowed to move after December 1 if they are not placed in the right tier.

The Midget Girls will also play in the North East League for the first time this year, with other teams from St. Paul, Vermilion, Bonnyville, Cold Lake and Boyle joining the league. The Pee wee Girls will be staying in the East Central League.

Practices started last night with the the Pee wee Boys on the ice and tonight all the other teams will be on the ice for their first practice. Now, let the games begin. The regular season will begin in two weeks. All our teams should do fairly well in the leagues and provincials this year.

Next week, one week from tonight, Tuesday, October 26, Elk Point Minor Hockey will have its first monthly meeting at 7:30 and everyone is welcome to attend. This is a way to get involved and see what's happening in the upcoming season, the new rule changes, clinics you should be attending and so on. Provincial applications are due in November, so Elk Point will once again apply to host. Getting to host provincials two years in a row is very unlikely, but it doesn't hurt to apply, it did happen in 1992 and 1993 when we hosted back-to-back Midget provincial tournaments, and it has happened in baseball these past two years when we hosted provincials. The "very scary" referee clinic is coming up at the end of the month on the Halloween weekend, October 30 and 31.

Curling club executive set

Elk Point Curling Club is all set to go, and has a full slate of officers to present at their organizational meeting. Come on down and let's get curling for another year.
